Matt Sturgeon brings a wealth of experience and a deep commitment to community advancement to Community College of Aurora's Advisory Council. With a distinguished career spanning over 30 years in local government, including his current service as the City Manager of Centennial, he possesses invaluable insights into municipal and county governance.

Throughout his career, Mr. Sturgeon has been a staunch advocate for collaborative and pragmatic approaches to problem-solving, leveraging his expertise to navigate complex challenges and drive positive change. He firmly believes in the power of common-sense solutions to address the needs of communities effectively.

In addition to his extensive government experience, Mr. Sturgeon has demonstrated his dedication to community development and economic prosperity through his service on various boards of directors. This includes:

- Rifle Regional Economic Development Corporation Board of Directors
- Rifle Gap Land Company (Golf Course) Board of Directors
- Community Builders Board of Directors
- Aspen Valley Land Trust Board of Directors

Matt Sturgeon's leadership and collaborative spirit have been instrumental in advancing initiatives that promote community development, economic growth, and regional collaboration. He is committed to leveraging his diverse background and expertise to contribute meaningfully to the Advisory Council, serving as a liaison between the Community College of Aurora and local government.
