Prior to recognizing Mr. Charles E. Poston, Rector of the William & Mary Board of Visitors, Dr. Matthew T. Lambert, Vice President for University Advancement, asked for a moment of silence in remembrance of Hulon L. Willis, Jr. ’77, P ’13.

Mr. Poston presided over the joint meeting and called it to order at 3:01 p.m.

Mr. Poston recognized the leadership of each board and asked the members of the corresponding board to stand following the recognition of their respective board leader: Ms. Janet Atwater, Chair of the Foundation Board of Trustees; Ms. Tina Kenny, President of the Alumni Association Board of Directors; Mr. Bruce Patterson, Co-Chair of the W&M Annual Giving Board of Directors; and Ms. Sherri Sell Phillips, Co-Chair of the W&M Annual Giving Board of Directors.

Mr. Poston introduced Dr. Katherine A. Rowe, President of William & Mary. President Rowe spoke about William & Mary’s (“the university” or “institution”) adaptability and commitment to integrity and excellence. She noted the importance of these attributes in a post-pandemic world as higher education faces challenges such as the demographic cliff and fewer traditional college age students. She said William & Mary must demonstrate what makes it distinct from its competition and articulate the value of a student's time at William & Mary, and noted these two topics would be a major focus of the Joint Boards meeting.

President Rowe mentioned William & Mary's commitment to access and affordability; the five-year tuition freeze; completion of the For the Bold campaign; launch of Vision 2026; and William & Mary's number one ranking for internships for a third year in a row. She noted that the university is building out a long-term strategy, and part of that process is working on the university's first comprehensive positioning strategy. President Rowe noted that the university needs to continue to use data when making operational and strategic decisions, particularly in communications among prospective students. She spoke about the All In campaign and athletics; the new school in computer science, data science, applied science and physics and the search underway for the dean of the new school; and the guarantee of a funded internship for all students who want one. Lastly, she provided an overview of the Democracy initiative under Vision 2026, and that the William & Mary Bray School Lab was featured on the Today Show a week ago.

President Rowe introduced Dr. Virginia M. Ambler, Vice President for Student Affairs, and Dr. Carrie L. Cooper, Dean of University Libraries, and co-chairs of the Democracy Initiative. Dr. Cooper spoke about how libraries promote democratic ideals by providing access to information, both past and present, and fostering an informed citizenry. She focused on the future of democracy and the importance of informed citizens. Dr. Cooper said that the Democracy Initiative has two areas of focus: Scholarships & Research and Civics Education & Practice. She provided three examples of research William & Mary is leading or participating in: (1) Bray School Lab; (2) Digital Inclusion & Governance Lab; and (3) Gates Forum.

Dr. Ambler said that as part of the Civics Education portion of the initiative, William & Mary is giving students the opportunity to see what democracy looks like in practice in day to day living on campus. She provided a brief history of the relationship between the administration of higher education institutions and students, and how it has changed particularly since the 1970's, giving students more autonomy and the right to self-governance. Dr. Ambler noted that William & Mary was the first university to adopt the Constructive Dialogue Institute (CDI) curriculum, which helps to equip students, staff and faculty to solve problems despite ideological differences. She also highlighted an orientation program based on the Aspen Institute's Better Arguments framework. The orientation program, Engaging Across Difference: How to Have Better Arguments, is now shared with all new undergraduates at the university. She noted that the program has also been shared with faculty, staff, and members of the William & Mary Parents Council. To provide a snapshot of what students, faculty and staff view as participants of the program, Ms. Ambler shared a video of Mr. A. Benjamin Spencer, Dean of the Law School, discussing the right to freedom of speech.

Dr. Cooper highlighted cards on the table that listed the Aspen Institutes five Principles of a Better Argument.

1. Take winning off the table.
2. Prioritize relationships & listen passionately.
3. Pay attention to context.

4. Embrace vulnerability.
5. Make room to transform.

She said these principles form the foundation for William & Mary's approach to Civics Education, and are helping to build a shared language on how to engage respectfully across difference. Dr. Cooper said the university has been working with a cohort of students who have been sharing their stories related to the Better Arguments framework and asked those present to stand. Mac Ambler, a member of the cohort, was asked to speak about his experiences at William & Mary as it relates to the Better Arguments framework. He spoke about making room to transform, learning to debate in a respectful way, and challenging personal perspective.

Following the presentation, participants of the Joint Boards meeting were asked to participate in table discussions and answer the following questions:

- Which of the principles most resonates with you and why?
- Which of the principles would you like to practice?

At the conclusion of the exercise Dr. Cooper said the university continues to evaluate its approach to connect and integrate the Better Arguments Principles and noted goals for the year, which include: looking for ways to share lessons learned at William & Mary on the national stage; offer a Better Arguments badge to students; and integrate the framework among those invited to campus to speak.

Following a short break Dr. Lambert introduced Ms. Heather E. Golden, Chief Marketing Officer. Ms. Golden began her presentation by reviewing the brand concept development timeline, noting that over the past year the university has been working to develop a final concept for its brand strategy, and presented the final concept of interconnection. She also discussed the results of the positioning study conducted in 2023, highlighted William & Mary's strengths and areas the institution can evolve, and presented the difference between the findings of this study and the one conducted in 2019. Ms. Golden presented four brand archetypes that have been identified based on the positioning study, spoke about how William & Mary associates with these archetypes, and noted areas to improve to forge a more powerful brand. She provided a recap of what the university learned from the positioning study and what the university is doing – Refine Positioning Statement; Activate Interconnection: Prospective Students; and Get in Market – to address the findings.

Ms. Golden asked those present to take a moment to review a list of potential positioning statements and mark through words or phrases that are unappealing and circle those that are appealing.

Following the exercise Ms. Golden said that to determine how to activate interconnection among the prospective student audience, the university will conduct a qualitative study with current juniors and seniors to get a better sense of prospective student mindsets. Ms. Golden presented three proposed messages for prospective students that promote interconnection and noted that testing of the proposed messages will begin next week.

Ms. Golden highlighted several social media/portal/marketing methods William & Mary is using to get into the market for prospective students. She noted the goal, action and result associated with each method. Lastly, she highlighted the Admissions Building refresh and the importance of creating a positive visitor experience.

Following another short break, Dr. Lambert noted that William & Mary's Professional Development Week is February 27 – March 3, 2024, and One Tribe One Day is March 26. He then provided an overview of the All In campaign, which concluded on December 31, 2023, with over $57M raised. Dr. Lambert recognized Ms. Sue H. Gerdelman, Chair of the All In Campaign, and thanked her for her leadership. Ms. Gerdelman received a standing ovation.

The Board of Visitors went into closed session at 4:56 p.m. with members of the W&M Foundation Board of Trustees, Alumni Association Board of Directors, W&M Annual Giving Board of Directors, and members of the W&M administration.
