

January 11, 2021

Greetings:

Happy New Year and we have great news! Based in part on feedback from our recent survey and the anticipated COVID restrictions, the NCAA has negotiated a new date for the upcoming Conference. We expect the new date will allow for greater in-person participation so please mark your calendar for August 9-12, 2021. As before, the conference will be held in Pinehurst, North Carolina at the Pinehurst Golf Resort & Spa and existing hotel reservations have been automatically moved to the new dates. In addition, the majority of our speakers have confirmed the new dates and the warmer weather should provide for some great fun in the sun.

The NCAA Annual Conference is a great place to see one another and network with our business partners. Feedback from the sponsors was also loud and clear that they prefer to interact with our membership in person. Therefore, when an opportunity arose to change to a later date when the COVID restrictions might not be as restrictive, the NCAA Board jumped on the new date.

We appreciate your continued flexibility and support for the NCAA as we navigate these difficult times. Please visit our web page for the conference agenda and arrange for hotel accommodations if you haven't already. Specific instructions are located on the website for those of you already registered for the conference (carried over from 2020 conference registration) and for those of you that had made reservations with Pinehurst for the March conference.
